Thailand accepts U.S. apology to end 'crisis'

BANGKOK (UPI) — Thailand accepted a note of regret from the United States today as a formal apology, ending the diplomatic crisis over the use of Thai-based U.S. Marines to recover the American freighter Mayaguez from Cambodia.

The formal note of regret was delivered to Foreign Minister Chartchai Choonhavan by U.S. charge d'affas Edward Masters.

"The case is closed," Chartchai said after the note was delivered. "We consider the note... as a formal apology."

The unsigned American note did not formally apologize for the use of Marines in Cambodia. Instead, it said, the United States "regrets the misunderstandings that have arisen between Thailand and the United States in regard to temporary placement of Marines at U Tapao to assist in recovery of the SS Mayaguez."

Demonstrators who staged a three-day protest against the United States ended their vigil outside the embassy. They had burned an effigy of Uncle Sam, replaced a bronze plaque on the embassy gate with cartoon of a vulture and "sentenced" President Ford and Secretary of State Henry Kissinger to death in a mock trial.

Chartchai said the key to Thai acceptance of the note was the last paragraph which said:

"The policy of the United States government continues to be one of respecting the sovereignty and independence of Thailand. The unique circumstances that have led to the recent turn of events do not alter this traditional relationship and are not going to be repeated."

Despite the ending of the diplomatic crisis, Chartchai said Thailand's ambassador in Washington still would be recalled and a complete review of U.S.-Thai treaties and agreements would be held.

During the crisis, Thailand formally notified the United States that all U.S. troops in Thailand, numbering about 23,000, would have to be withdrawn within 10 months.

Meantime, a diplomatic delegation from the new Communist government in Saigon ended a three-day visit to Bangkok.

Massive search for armed youth ends in arrest

A juvenile court petition on charges of assault with a deadly weapon was sought today against a 14-year-old Lompoc youth whose escape at gunpoint from a Lompoc policeman triggered a massive search Friday by law officers.

Clarke Russell Hendrix was taken into custody in Lompoc Shopping Center Friday night at 10:50 ending 12 hours of intensive search. Hendrix whose name was originally reported as "Weatherspoon," drew a revolver when accosted by officers in front of Thrifty Drug Store, but dropped the weapon after a tense confrontation. Officers said the weapon was loaded.

Hendrix who lives in a rural home on Sweeney Road, had been sought since 9:55 a.m. Friday when he reportedly bolted from the office of his probation officer, Gene Hutton, in the county building.

The original report was merely, a BOL, Be on the Lookout directive. That was changed later when the youth was reported armed with a firearm.

Close on the heels of the BOL, the radio in the police department on South D Street crackled with the message: Officer needs assistance now. The officer sending the message was Patrolman Harry Heidt.

Heidt's message brought all available Lompoc police and reserve officers, sheriff's deputies and Highway Patrolmen to the area surrounding the intersection of Highways 1 and 246.

Officers sealed the area off at Seventh Street and Highway 246, and on Highway 1, and Highway 246, south and east of that intersection. First reports that a sniper was involved proved unfounded. Meanwhile however, residents in Crestview Terrace, with backyards looking down on the area, reportedly had sought police protection. Officers armed with shotguns and rifles with telescopic sights mounted guard from a point where they could view the slopes where Hendrix was believed to be hiding.

Information initially was piecemeal, fragmentary and in some cases misleading. Later it was learned that Heidt stopped his patrol car at the Highway 1 and 246 intersection to field interview a young man resembling the youth who had run away from the probation officer.

During the interview, Hendrix, reportedly pulled a small caliber hand gun and ordered Heidt away. When Heidt turned to radio for assistance the youth reportedly fled into dense undergrowth covering the hillsides.

Search parties led by Chief J.D. Smith manned city utility trucks in sweeps through the dense growth. Meanwhile other officers on foot searched the area without success. Shortly after 2 p.m. Friday, Smith called off the search, leaving behind a skeleton team at the intersection.

After Hendrix was captured, he told officers he had not intended to shoot Heidt, but had sought to provoke the officer to shoot him. Hendrix also told officers he had hoped the officers would shoot him in the confrontation in the shopping center.

In addition to the bullets in the handgun when he was arrested, the youth also had 21 rounds of .22 caliber ammunition in a pocket, according to the report.

The youth reportedly had the handgun in his possession when he kept an appointment with his probation officer Friday morning.

Youth, 16, among six hurt in weekend traffic mishaps

Weekend traffic accidents brought injury to six persons, including a 16-year-old youth whose car plunged down an embankment near Surf Depot after a highspeed chase by sheriff's deputies.

Mark Richard Quesnel, of 409 S. Hawthorne St., was listed in good condition in Lompoc Hospital today with a possible concussion suffered in the accident near Surf. Sheriff's deputies said a car later identified as the one they found overturned in a ditch sped toward them on Highway 246 near Ocean Park while they were on routine patrol Sunday afternoon. The deputies gave chase at speeds of up to 100 m.p.h. but lost the car as it sped west. A short time later they found the car in the ditch and called for an ambulance.

Chester Wayne Thorne, 17, of 3910 Mesa Circle Dr., Vandenberg Village suffered minor injuries Friday night in a collision of his car and another car driven by Teresa Julia Anna Acin, 57, of 124-A North B St. The mishap occurred at H Street and North Avenue, according to police.

William Gene Gonyo, 24, of 111 North F St., suffered minor injuries when the car he was driving hit the wall of a building at 114 South H St. Gonyo was taken to Lompoc Hospital for treatment.

John Edgar Winningham, 22, of 532 North M St., suffered minor injuries Friday when the car in which he was a passenger, driven by Roland Dale Garbiso, 17, of 728 N. Fifth St., collided with a car driven by Ruth King Bryan, 66, of 512 South G St. Winningham was taken to Lompoc Hospital for treatment. The mishap occurred at Ocean Avenue and F Street.

Geraldine Paull, 24, of Los Angeles suffered minor injuries in a collision of her car and one driven by Leslie Merlin Lewis, 56, of 317 South O St. The mishap occurred on Highway 1, about five miles north of Highway 101. Ms. Paull was taken to Lompoc Hospital for treatment.

Larry Junior Melcher, 35, of 306 W. North Ave., Apt. 132, suffered apparently minor injuries when the motorcycle he was driving hit a curb on Highway 101 south of Highway 154. A passenger on the motorcycle, Janice Andrea Edwards, 25, of 715 North A St., also suffered minor injuries.

Kissinger ready for Gromyko talk

VIENNA (UPI) — Secretary of State Henry Kissinger made his post-Vietnam diplomatic debut today, going through the social niceties with his Austrian hosts before superpower talks with Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko.

Gromyko, a dour-faced veteran of Soviet-American negotiations, was flying in to Vienna as Kissinger munched sweetcakes with leaders of neutralist Austria.

The real business came at 5 p.m. —tea time in Austria. It was Kissinger's first face to face talks with a Kremlin leader since Communists captured South Vietnam and Cambodia.

Gromyko, an old diplomatic hand aware of American sensibilities, was expected to skirt the Indochina issue and sound out Kissinger instead on U.S. policy in the Middle East.

The foreign minister was said to seek word whether the United States would support the Kremlin's call for a resumption of full-scale Middle East peace talks in Geneva.

The Soviet Union has stepped up calls for new talks in Geneva since the collapse of Kissinger's step-by-step diplomacy in the region two months ago.

A senior U.S. official with the Kissinger party said the secretary would tell Gromyko little, wishing to wait until President Ford meets next month with Egyptian President Anwar Sadat and Israeli Prime Minister Yitzak Rabin.

Power blackout caused by plane hitting line

A plane piloted by a man from Bakersfield severed a power line near Lompoc Airport yesterday causing a blackout of homes in Vandenberg Village and Mission Hills.

Jack Wayne Horton, 46, managed to land his damaged plane safely at Lompoc Airport.

Horton told investigating sheriff's deputies that he was flying along the Santa Ynez River at an altitude of about 50 feet when one wing clipped a power line.

There was no immediate explanation for the low altitude Horton was flying at the time of the mishap.

Preliminary budget faces City Council

Consideration of a North First Street lot as a public nuisance and revision of the city's master street tree plan will come before the Lompoc City Council tomorrow night, along with the city's preliminary annual budget.

The public session will begin at 7:30 p.m. at the school district board room, 1301 North A St.

Not yet published at press time, the 1975-76 budget will be the subject of special council sessions during this month and June.

A lot in the 300 block of North First St. contains several wrecked vehicles, auto parts and debris, according to city Community Development Director Al Autry. The lot is the site of an auto wrecking business. If the council declares it a public nuisance, the property owner will have to screen the area from view from the street, remove the cars and debris or pay for city clearance of the area.

In a proposed amendment to the master street plan for Ocean Avenue and H Street, the panel will consider replacing Evergreen Elm as the designated street tree on Ocean Avenue between A and F Streets. The replacement tree recommended is a variety of Magnolia. The change is recommended because the state Division of Transportation will no longer approve the elm along state highways due to root damage. East Ocean Avenue is part of state Highway One.

In other action the council will:

—Consider rezoning a list of properties in order to bring their zoning into conformance with the Environmental Resource Management and Land Use Element of the general plan.

—Consider an ordinance setting maximum ambulance service and related medical fees for city-licensed ambulance operations. The recommended charges would be those presently in use by Community Ambulance Service, which operates under city license. The law would eliminate the present requirement for an annual fee.

—Consider the purchase of a yard crane for use at the city corporate yard and other city facilities.

—Set a public hearing for June 6 on the planned use report for a revenue sharing entitlement.

—Consider acquiring property for widening Chestnut Avenue between second and Third Streets.

—Hear a report from the city attorney on a proposed modification of a supplemental water application.

Ford demands full casualty information

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Puzzled by the delay in determining U.S. casualties in the Mayaguez rescue operation, President Ford has demanded all information immediately and will not "hide any bad news," a White House spokesman said today.

Press Secretary Ron Nessen said Ford "is somewhat puzzled about the length of time it has taken" the Pentagon to provide a final casualty list from Wednesday's rescue of the American freighter and its crew seized by Cambodia.

At first the Pentagon set the toll at one dead and 13 missing, but Sunday Defense Secretary James R. Schlesinger said it appeared five Americans had been killed, 16 were missing and 70 to 80 were wounded.

Reporters asked Nessen why it was taking so long to get a casualty list, in light of the quick and precise body counts available during the Vietnam War.

Nessen said there wasn't "any intention to hide any bad news."

"The President wants those figures as much as you do and has indicated such," he said. "He is somewhat puzzled about the length of time it has taken."

Nessen told reporters that the administration unsuccessfully tried five avenues to gain release of the ship and its crew without force.

He said a message was given by the State Department to a Chinese diplomat to be relayed to Cambodia, but the diplomat refused to accept it; a copy was sent to the Cambodian embassy in Peking; a copy was given to the Chinese foreign ministry in Peking, but it was returned 24 hours later to U.S. liaison office there; a copy was sent to the United Nations, and the President made clear his message through the news media.

Day Treatment Center offers help to many

(Editor's Note: This is the first of three articles dealing with mental health facilities in Lompoc Valley).

By STAN TULLEDO
Feature editor

What William J. Clarke, coordinator of the Santa Barbara County Day Treatment Center in Lompoc, would like to see happen is not, he knows, about to happen. He would like to see people getting yearly mental check-ups as a preventative action to emotional illness.

"They do this in public health," he says, "They go around looking for bugs. Why can't they do this with people?"

But Clarke knows it isn't going to happen and why: because of the stigma attached to having to resort to professional assistance in one's emotional life.

"Everyone," he assured, "can benefit from periodic evaluations of their emotional reality."

Possibly, if preventative measures were taken, there wouldn't be as great a need for a mental hospital in Camarillo or four-day treatment centers in Santa Barbara County, suggests Clarke.

William Clarke

The center in Lompoc is located at 136 North G St. where "residents" spend six to eight hours a day, four days a week, in a program designed to help them function better as husbands, wives — whatever roles they are playing out in life.

The program includes a wide variety of activities and features, such as drug therapy; individual, family and group therapy; occupational therapy; bowling; yoga, meditation and exercising. The activities are supervised by the center's staff of an occupational therapist, a nurse, two psychiatrists, a mental health associate, a mental health assistant, and a psychiatric social worker, Clarke.

As a resident improves, his hours and days of treatment are reduced. At times the improved resident is referred to the county mental health clinic in Lompoc for weekly counseling.

The former resident, Clarke believes, is better prepared to cope with the attritions of life than when he began the program because the program is an effective one.

"I know of only one person to go from Lompoc to Camarillo in the five years the center has been here," said the coordinator. "It's because of the strength of the community mental health program in Lompoc."

He cites these strengths as three-fold. One is the "cooperative attitude" of key people in Lompoc; two, the "dis-investment" of people's notion that mental illness is caused by possession of the devil, for example; three is the existence of the 1962 Short-Doyle Act and the 1969 Lanterman-Petris-Short Act which have made the concept of community mental health programs and services possible in California. Before the two acts, persons suffering mental illness were "warehoused" in state hospitals, according to Clarke.

The thinking behind day treatment centers, which in essence provide "partial hospitalization," is that more effective care can be administered to people in their home communities, rather than a distant and alien hospital. Residents are treated in the centers, but live at home.

As an important feature, centers eliminate the re-integration trauma that most hospitalized mental patients suffer upon returning home.

Although each center functions in this concept, each center is not operated alike. The Lompoc center — covering the Lompoc and Santa Ynez Valleys — emphasizes a program of resident self-help supported by the staff in a family-like atmosphere, Clarke described.

He explained that the program is not stagnant, but changing, extending and eliminating its features. For example, the program was changed recently by four innovations.

They are an "advocacy" system wherein new residents are assigned to old residents for orientation purposes; "behavior contracting" wherein new patients are required to outline specific goals on paper they want to meet before leaving; occupational therapy evaluation; and a greater emphasis on behavior modification where staff rewards certain resident behavior and ignores other type of behavior.

"Many things we were doing we are still doing. The changes represent an extension of what we have been doing on a smaller scale," said Clarke.

The center started in 1970 and Clarke has been its only coordinator. Over 600 people have gone through the program; 50 persons are now enrolled while on the average 30 attend daily.

Some residents come to the center for two weeks, some six months and some for a year or more.

There are three main groupings of persons who may be helped through day treatment: those who are leaving full-time inpatient hospital care and needing a transitional period of intensive care; those whose treatment needs exceed the help that can be provided through more traditional once or twice weekly therapy sessions; and those who, under ordinary circumstances would require hospitalization, but are well enough to remain at home part of the time through provision of day treatment.

The program is voluntary and residents are billed according to their ability to pay. The center is open from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m., Monday through Friday. Some program features such as a couple's group and socialization group are held on week nights.

Referrals are unrestricted and may come from lay as well as professional sources.

Project SAVE set to be scrapped

By DICK PRAUL
Courthouse reporter

The Board of Supervisors is expected to take affirmative action today in supporting a recommendation from the county's administrative officer to scrap the proposed multi-million dollar Project SAVE, which was touted as a revolutionary new prisoner rehabilitation facility for the county.

Administrative Officer Raymond D. Johnson said he is recommending the supervisors now reject all bids for the combined Project SAVE and the north county juvenile hall construction program and call for new bids for a separate 20-bed north county juvenile hall.

Project SAVE was slated to be built in the Santa Maria area and was especially highly regarded by Sheriff John W. Carpenter.

But Johnson has noted the county is in a financial crisis this year, with the proposed county budget over $100-million and calling for an additional $11 million in tax funds to cover it. The tax rate could go up $1.22 unless there is major surgery on the budget, he showed.

Johnson said he is also seeking to have his office directed along with that of the sheriff and county counsel to meet with the State Office of Criminal Justice Planning regarding cancellation of Project SAVE.

Johnson in his report to the board recommending shelving of the rehabilitation project — which was to bear the name of retired County Supervisor Curtis Tunnell — reminded the board there had been suggestions that one way to avert a historic tax increase this year would be to push to one side capital outlay projects such as SAVE.

The administrative officer gave these arguments in recommending SAVE be scrapped:

— It would be necessary to add $203,265 to presently available funding of $1.8 million to award the contract to the lowest bidder.

— Operating expenses of SAVE and the juvenile facility together would be more than $1 million a year including addition of 57 added employes.

— The county could save $1.5 million in net requirements, and reduce by 18 cents the total estimated tax rate.

— Johnson said Sheriff Carpenter has asked that the supervisors be made aware that "cancellation of SAVE may possibly represent a short-range financial solution this year and that any long-term increase in need for prisoner housing must eventually be faced."

Vandalism probed in VV

Sheriff's officials today were investigating four acts of vandalism over the weekend in Vandenberg Village.

Sand at 4480 Sirius Ave.

There were no suspects in any of the cases today.

Secrecy shrouds Jury sessions

Secrecy continued Friday to shroud the County Grand Jury's reported renewed probe into a bribery case which has resulted in former actor Philip Regan being sent to prison for a 1-14 year period.

Both Regan and Kenneth Palmer, Santa Barbara public relations man, reportedly have been summoned before the Grand Jury in sessions in the County Courthouse. Palmer had worked with sheriff's officers to help bring about Regan's arrest originally.

The Grand Jury switched its sessions from the County Administration Building to a Courthouse meeting spot to gain more privacy, it was learned.

Regan was brought from Chino - where he is serving his prison sentence - under guard to Santa Barbara for the Grand Jury meeting.

Doctor's strike grows to Southern hospitals

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The doctor's strike spread today from the San Francisco Bay area to 32 Southern California hospitals.

Strikers said the new walkouts were a show of sympathy for their Northern California colleagues who have refused to work for the last 19 days.

As the walkout by anesthesiologists protesting high malpractice insurance premiums expanded, a special session of the state legislature convened at the request of Gov. Edmund Brown Jr. to deal with the medical insurance crisis.

A boycott of all nonemergency patient care by 120 Los Angeles area anesthesiologists curtailed operations at 13 hospitals in the Long Beach-South Bay area and 19 more in the San Gabriel Valley. Additional hospitals could also be affected by the walkout, a spokesman said.

Anesthesiologists at St. Joseph's Medical Center and Burbank Community Hospitals in Burbank, and Alhambra Community Hospital, announced Saturday they would begin a work slowdown in about 10 days.

One leader of the protest action said "four anesthesiologists can shut off 100 surgeons."

The walkout was a demonstration of concern and a show of sympathy for their colleagues in Northern California, a spokesman said.

In the San Francisco area, anesthesiologists refused to work at 77 hospitals in nine counties since May 1.

Only emergency operations, cancer surgeries and childbirths were being performed by the dissident doctors today.

The 300-member Los Angeles Society of Anesthesiologists said last week it would "not act in unison" on behalf of their bay area colleagues but that it was encouraging doctors "to act individually."

Some Southern California hospitals said they may have to lay off up to 33 per cent of their employes because of the anticipated drop in patient loads and revenue.

The insurance crisis surfaced with the dramatic boost in malpractice insurance rates — up to 600 per cent.

Emmy awards to highlight ladies

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Tonight is ladies night at the 27th annual Television Academy awards presentation, with 10 actresses —seven of them previous Emmy winners — acting as hostesses.

Former Emmy winners Lucille Ball, Carol Burnett, Michael Learned, Mary Tyler Moore, Jean Stapleton, Susan St. James and Karen Valentine, will be joined by Beatrice Arthur, who stars in "Maude," Cher Bono, "Cher," and Teresa Graves "Get Christie Love."

Comedians Dick Rowan and Dan Martin, Jack Albertson and Freddie Prinze will be in the entertainment portions of the show, according to director Paul Keyes.

The comedy series "M-A-S-H," a satirical spoof of an Army medical unit during the Korean War, and "QB VII," the dramatization of Leon Uris' novel involving a concentration camp doctor working for the Nazis, compete for the largest portion of the awards during the two-hour presentation, which airs on CBS at 6 p.m. PDT.

"QB VII," a 6¼ hour drama that was aired in two parts, won 13 nominations. "M-A-S-H" was up for 11 Emmys, including a nomination for Alan Alda as best performance by an actor in a comedy.

Lindbergh's last days told by physician in Hawaii

CHICAGO (UPI) — Charles Lindbergh spent the last days of his life in a remote cottage near Hana, Maui, in Hawaii, planning his own simple burial. He rejected the medical paraphernalia that might have prolonged his life artificially.

In the current issue of the Journal of the American Medical Association, Dr. Milton Howell, a doctor in Hana, reported on how the famed Lone Eagle methodically handled his own death and made it into a constructive act.

During a preoperative examination in 1972, when he was 70, Lindbergh learned he had lymphoma, a fatal disease. Through radiation therapy, Lindbergh was still able to travel extensively, as far as the Philippines to promote the preservation of the monkey-eating eagle and to study the stone-age Tassaday tribe on Mindanao.

Periodically Lindbergh returned to "his beloved Kipahulu Valley" on Maui to help clear a neglected graveyard beside a picturesque church built by Yankee missionaries. He made the legal arrangements for his burial and selected his own grave site.

The progress of the disease hospitalized Lindbergh for several months. Finally in August 1974, he telephoned Hana from New York.

"This is Charles Lindbergh," he said. "I have had a conference with my doctors, and they advise me that I have only a short time to live. Please find me a cottage or a cabin near the village. I am coming home to Maui."

He made the 5,000-mile trip in a litter and spent his last eight days in a cabin overlooking the sea with two nurses, his family and Howell.

The Maui doctor wrote:

"He was elated for the first few days. His appetite improved. His fluid intake was adequate. There were regular morning conferences with the ranch superintendent to give instructions and receive reports on the progress of the construction of his grave and the building of his simple coffin. He planned his funeral service along with his family and requested that people attend in their work clothes.

"His days were full. There was time for reminiscing, time for discussion and time for laughter. As his lungs filled, he required oxygen from time to time, and codeine, 15 mg as necessary. Finally, he lapsed into a coma and died 12 hours later. He wanted no respirator, defibrillator, or other complicated paraphernalia. None was available. He received excellent, prompt, responsible nursing care, oxygen when needed, a minimum of analgesia, and a great deal of love and consideration from his family and the medical staff.

"He stated that he wished his death to be a constructive act in itself. His example of simplicity, his careful planning, his unfailing politeness and consideration for those around him, his public refusal of medical heroics, and his humble funeral are evidence of that wish.

"Death was another event in his life, as natural as his birth had been in Minnesota more than 72 years before."

Americans eating less fish

WASHINGTON (UPI) — More fish came into American ports in 1974 than the year before, but Americans ate less.

The Commerce Department fish report Sunday said the difference was caused by the increasing use of fish products for fertilizer and other nonedible products.

San Pedro, Calif. won the 1974 title of the nation's busiest fishing port followed by five small Louisiana towns on the Gulf of Mexico.

In 1974, Americans consumed an average 12 pounds of fish products, slightly above the 11.9 pound average of the past five years, but below the 1973 record high of 12.7 pounds.

Seafood imports in 1974 hit a record value of $1.69 billion, up 7 per cent from a year earlier.

But the value of products landed at U.S. ports by American fishermen dropped about 1 per cent from 1973 to $898.5 million. The 1974 volume, at 4.9 billion pounds, was up 4 per cent from a year ago. The monetary value was lower because of falling prices for many fish and byproducts, the report said.

Mayaguez crew heads home

SINGAPORE (UPI) — Half the crew of the U.S. merchant ship Mayaguez began heading home today, bonuses in hand and capture by Cambodian Communists behind them.

The 10,000-ton freighter — with new crew members replacing the departing sailors —steamed out of Singapore at noon on a 1,200-mile trip to Hong Kong.

Sea-Land, owner of the Mayaguez, gave each of the crew members a $1,000 bonus when the ship arrived in Singapore Saturday and offered the sailors free flights home.

Lee Carroll, Sea-Land's Singapore representative, said 20 of the 40 crewmen accepted the free flights and new sailors arrived Sunday to replace them.

"A few of them have homes in Manila and Tokyo and they will be leaving today and tomorrow," a spokesman for Pan American Airways said. "But most of them are flying to the West Coast."

The airline spokesman said the rest of the crew will fly Tuesday for San Francisco. Delays in getting paid forced them to miss a flight Sunday night.

The Mayaguez, held four days by Khmer Rouge forces, was captured Monday 60 miles off the Cambodian mainland. The drama culminated in a U.S. Marine landing on Koh Tang, a small island in the Gulf of Thailand.

(Defense Secretary James Schlesinger said Sunday new figures showed three Marines and two airmen were killed, 16 missing and up to 80 wounded in the battle on the island. He said the tally was not final.)

Chavez support gathers

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Hundreds of Cesar Chavez supporters converged on the Capitol today in support of Gov. Edmund G. Brown's compromise farm labor bill, but the rival Teamsters Union called off its protest for fear of violence.

Ralph Cotner, director of the Teamsters' agriculture organizing division, said union officials canceled the demonstration of an estimated 10,000 workers at the request of lawmakers and Roman Catholic Cardinal Timothy Manning of Los Angeles.

"There was too much fear of a big explosion at the Capitol, violence and so forth," Cotner said. "So we decided to let our people do their demonstrating in their local areas. We feel we have sufficiently made our point.

Last week, members of the United Farm Workers Union and Teamsters confronted each other during an angry, day-long confrontation in which sporadic fist fights broke out. Eight persons were arrested.

The Teamsters, which oppose the governor's plan, had announced they would turn out 10,000 demonstrators while Chavez' supporters were expecting 5,000 of their own.

The target of the demonstration was Brown's bill which was scheduled for a crucial vote this afternoon in the Senate Finance Committee, the last hurdle before the Senate floor.

The first busloads of Chavez supporters, waving their familiar black eagle banners and chanting "Cesar Si, Teamsters No," began arriving at 4 a.m. and massed on the west steps of the Capitol. State Police reported no incidents.

Hoffman claims he can locate Patty

NEW YORK (UPI) — Fugitive Abbie Hoffman says he could find missing heiress Patty Hearst in a month if he were to put his mind to it.

The former Yippie and Chicago 7 member, wanted in New York for jumping bail on cocaine-selling charges, said in an interview taped for broadcast tonight he has undergone plastic surgery, remarried and was doing white collar work.

Hoffman's remarks about Patty Hearst were generalizations, based not so much on any specific knowledge of Miss Hearst's whereabouts as on their common interest in survival.

"Everybody faces the same kind of problems," Hoffman said. "The same survival problems. Much the same psychological problems ... but I'm not going to say how I would do it, frankly. I wouldn't say that because that would be too valuable."

Hoffman said he believed that with enough money and enough manpower the police would catch both him and Patty Hearst.

He implied that a major reason underground people get caught is because others already in custody eventually give the necessary information.

Hoffman said his anonymity was the chief basis of his ability to elude capture since he disappeared in March, 1974.

"I essentially did it alone," Hoffman said. "Alone is the easiest way for me because anonymity is the easiest. It's the best defense. But I know that I have a network of people willing to help me all over the world and that's very assuring when you're all alone."

The interview was conducted by freelance writer Ron Rosenbaum and taped by Michael Shamberg.

The telecast describes the preparations for the interview, including numerous phone calls and blindfolding of the interviewers who were driven around for hours with no notion of where they finally ended up.

The interview will be carried in New York City by WNETTV, the local Public Broadcasting System station.

Brown sees more than 'sugar pill' to cure crisis

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. says more than a sugar pill is needed to cure the state's growing malpractice insurance illness.

Brown, who called a special legislative session beginning today to deal with the crises of striking doctors and skyrocketing malpractice insurance premiums, has also vetoed a bill that would have created an "insurance pool."

"Palatives which divert attention from unpleasant realities are not in the public interest," he said in a Saturday message.

The measure was introduced before May 1 when the Argonaut Insurance Co., of Menlo Park, stopped issuing group rates and provided only individual policies at higher cost.

It would have set up a pooling system in counties where the insurance was not available.

In his veto message, Brown said "fundamental reform of the medical and legal fraternities as well as the insurance industry is a prerequisite to resolving the malpractice problem."

He has offered a sweeping nine-point program including periodic exams to assure that doctors' training is current, putting a majority of "public members" on the state Board of Medical Examiners and provisions making it easier to strip the licenses of doctors for lack of competency.

Other proposals called for a "Medical Peace Corps" to serve low-income Californians, restrictions on lawyers fees in malpractice cases and a panel to arbitrate malpractice disputes.

But the special session is not likely to produce immediate reductions in insurance premiums, some of which have increased 600 per cent, and doctors have vowed they won't end their walkout until the problem is solved.

Famed Little trial scheduled

RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — The murder trial of Joan Little, a 21-year-old black woman charged with killing a white Beaufort County jailer, has been scheduled to begin in Wake County Superior Court July 14.

A special two-week term has been set aside in the court for trial of the controversial case. The judge has not yet been assigned.

Miss Little is charged in the ice-pick stabbing death of Clarence Alligood, 62. She contends she acted to ward off a rape attempt.

Superior Court Judge Henry A. McKinnon Jr. earlier ordered the trial moved from eastern North Carolina to Raleigh after defense attorneys argued that pretrial publicity and racial prejudice made a fair trial impossible in eastern North Carolina.

Prosecutors asked the state Supreme Court to strike down the order for relocating the trial, but the high court upheld McKinnon's order.

Miss Little remains free on bond totaling $115,000.

Wine board slated for dissolution

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The California Wine Advisory Board, a 37-year-old public agency that swelled economically with the rising popularity of the grape, will be dissolved by its board of directors, effective July 1.

Advisory board funds are under investigation by the state auditor general, but Ernest Haas, general manager of the Eastside Winery in Lodi and chairman of the board, said the audit has nothing to do with the decision to close down.

Founded in 1938 to promote the wine industry, the richly funded organization will be absorbed by the California Wine Institute, a private trade association based in San Francisco.

President chooses theme of 'Centennial Woman'

"Bi-Centennial Woman" is the theme chosen by Frances (Mrs. Farley) Beckett for her term as the new president of Lompoc Community Woman's Club. Using this as her cue, Jane Henning, installing officer, "cooked" a colonial recipe for stew with the assistance of the officers-elect. For each she had made a Bi-Centennial patchwork potholder, "to handle more easily all situations arising from their duties." The ceremony took place May 14 at the Royal Coach Restaurant. (Officers are listed in the picture caption above.)

Introduced by Mrs. Beckett were her selections for new chairmen: Frances McAllister, membership; Alice Jauncey, decorating; Jane Henning, press and publicity; Lucille Martin, historian; Dottie Chilson, corsages; Sally McCarthy, fine arts; Elaine Carlson, devotions; Pearl Price, travel; Mary Frances Berkey, parliamentarian.

Entertainment of the afternoon was an enthusiastic Bi-Centennial concert by the Senior Citizens Club Nuts and Bolts Band.

Guests of the day were Mary Hicks, Juanita Gonzalez, Margaret Durell, Betty Moore, Evelyn Martin, Pearl Crocker and Mrs. Steve Yuhas.

A club check for $150 was presented to Rosalie (Mrs. Fred) McVicar, Lompoc Museum treasurer, to be used as the Museum board sees fit. The club also donated to the Raymond White Youth in Concert Fund to help the young student on expenses for his European tour with other young musicians. Alberta Larsen collected additional funds to be given in the name of the club.

Members of the club Garden Section will have their final meeting of the year this Tuesday at Alisal Ranch. Transportation cars will leave the Royal Coach parking area at 11:30 a.m. Election of officers will be held as well as a brief business meeting. The group will then tour homes in the Alisal Solvang area.

Dear Abby

More on moochers

DEAR ABBY: You had a letter in your column about people who were always mooching rides, and these moochers were called "schnorrers."

I would like to know where that term came from. We are one of the 200 families in the United States with the name of "Schnorr," and we object to the use of our name with such a meaning.

We hope that the Schnorr families in Oregon, New Mexico, Illinois and all the other states feel as we do and that you get 199 more letters of protest. Thank you.

THE SCHNORRS OF ARIZONA

DEAR SCHNORRS: The verb "to beg" is "schnorren" in German. From it comes the noun, "schnorrer" — which means "a beggar, a panhandler, a moocher, a cheapskate, a chiseler, a bum, a drifter, or a borrower. It can also mean a compulsive bargain hunter, bargainer or an impudent indigent."

The above information was "schnorred" (borrowed without permission) from "The Joys of Yiddish" — a delightful and authoritative book written by Leo Rosten.

DEAR ABBY: I have also had it with schnorrers who mooch rides. But when an acquaintance calls and asks if I'm going to a certain affair and I say I am, she immediately asks, "May I ride with you?" Then what do I say?

My greatest objection to these freeloaders is the loss of my personal freedom of movement. I can neither arrive nor leave an event at my own convenience. And I can't choose the route I will take. Even though I may be downtown shopping, I must leave my home because one habitual rider lives near me.

I must also wait until the end of the affair, or until my riders have finished visiting with their friends — not a chance of leaving a few minutes early to stop at the market or do a few errands because I must deliver my riders to their homes promptly.

My car is a two-door. One hefty freeloader who had trouble getting into my back seat said, "When you get a new car, will you please get a four-door?"

I wish I had had the nerve to say, "Like fun I will. My next car will be a two-seater!"

WHAT TO DO?

DEAR WHAT: Some people actually enjoy providing others with rides, but since you so obviously consider it an imposition when you're asked, simply say, "I may not be leaving from home." (True, you may not.) Or, "I may not be going directly home afterward." (also true.)

DEAR ABBY: I am married to a Mama's boy. Mama lives 1,500 miles away, but she writes to Sonny regularly three times a week. And Sonny calls her every Sunday. (He even asks her how he should vote.)

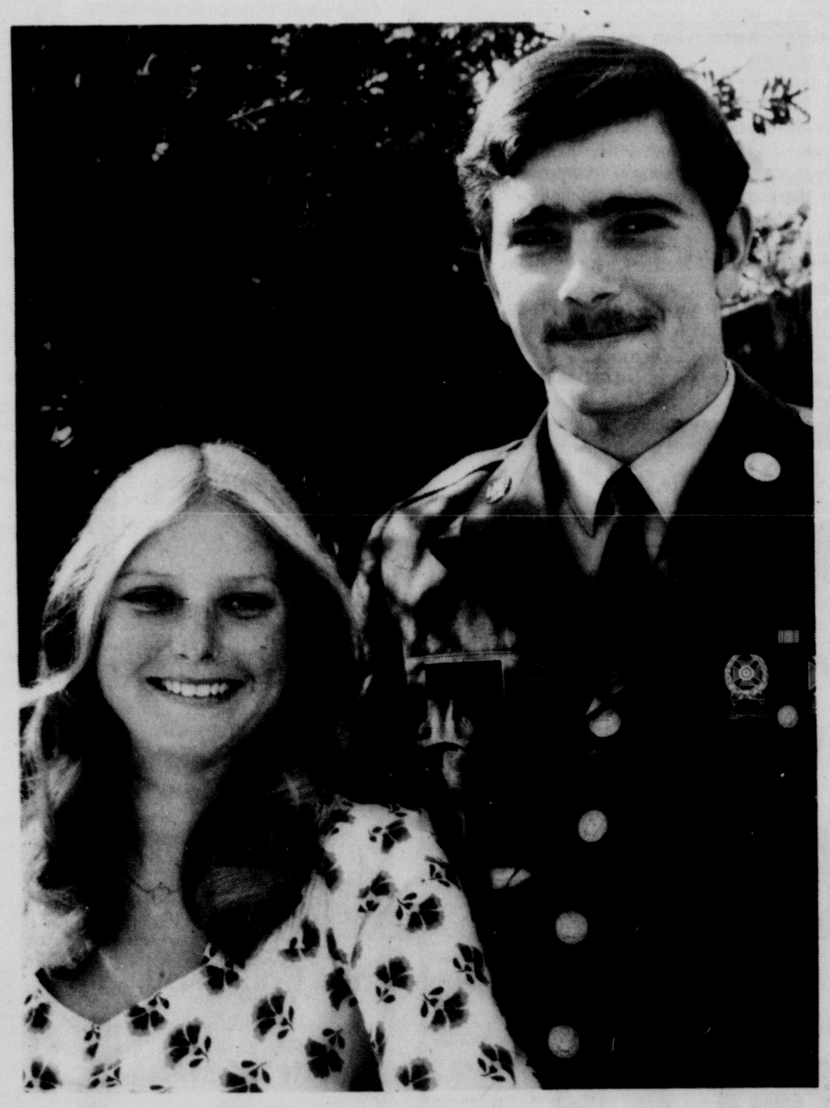
He is 64 and Mama is 79. I know she can't last forever, but what happens to a Mama's boy when Mama is no longer around to tell him what to do?

SICK OF BOTH OF THEM

DEAR SICK: If he's still a Mama's boy at 64, he missed the last boat to manhood, so he'll probably look for another "Mama." And think you're her.

For Abby's booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding," send $1 to Abigail Van Buren, 132 Lasky Dr., Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212. Please enclose a long, self-addressed, stamped (20c) envelope.

Everyone has a problem. What's yours? For a personal reply, write to ABBY: Box No. 69700, L.A., Calif. 90069. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.



ENGAGEMENT of their daughter, Barbara Elaine and Robert Ray McLain is announced by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Richard H. Fraser, 4133 Sirius Ave., Vandenberg Village. The bride-elect is a junior at Cabrillo High School. Her fiance is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Jay McLain, 4158 Sirius Ave., a 1973 graduate of Cabrillo High School. He is presently enlisted in the United States Army. The couple has chosen June 21 as their wedding date in Queen of Angels Catholic Church.

Native California flora is club speaker's topic

"Selection and Use of Native California Flora in Arrangements" will be the subject as Alpha Club Garden and Beautification Section brings the program for the May luncheon meeting of the general club. Introducing the speaker Wednesday at the clubhouse will be Helen (Mrs. John) Larsson, section chairman. He is Brookes Davis, organist-director at the Grace Lutheran Church, Santa Barbara, and music instructor at Cate School, Carpinteria.

It is of his hobby that Davis will speak however. Majoring in music at West Virginia Wesleyan College and George Peabody Teachers College, Nashville, he minored in botany and natural science. He acquired an avid interest in wild flowers while pursuing still another hobby — mountain climbing. During these times he frequently noted the array of dried weeds high on mountain cliffs.

In more recent years, when his health failed and he was no longer allowed to climb, Davis started the hobby of collecting dried weeds, seed pods and cones, creating interesting arrangements with these alone. A member of the Santa Barbara Botanic Gardens Association where he has studied taxonomy and the native flora of California, he has become intensely interested in the subjects. His arrangements of dried materials have become popular and he has sold to shops in Carpinteria, Santa Barbara, and currently, Gaviota Village. Davis will display a number of his arrangements for Alpha Club members, demonstrate his techniques, and discuss locations in which to find dried specimens in the field.

Brookes Davis

With the approach of Alpha Club's 53rd annual flower show June 28-29 in Veterans Memorial Building, the speaker's talk and displays should benefit those planning to enter arrangements under certain classifications. "A Walk in the Woods," a foliage arrangement with cones or pods permitted, is one suggestion. Dried arrangements might also be adaptable for entry under the "Memories of Yesterday" classification which calls for an arrangement in an old-fashioned container. Still a third possibility is use of such material on the beginner's table, "A First Ribbon," which has no restrictions regarding materials used.

First aid demonstration slated at Fillmore School

Approximately 120 fifth grade students from Fillmore, La Honda, El Camino, Los Berros and Westwings will participate in a first aid fair at Fillmore School Auditorium, 1211 E. Pine Ave., May 21 from 7 - 9 p.m.

Although all the students will not be able to take part in the fair, all students and their parents are invited to attend. The general public is also invited.

Students in the fifth grades at the five schools have completed a course in first aid and the fair will be an opportunity for them to practice the skills they have learned.

Areas covered included the definition and value of first aid; steps in first aid; wounds, dressings and infections; bleeding and the circulatory system; shock; poisonings; burns, fractures and mouth to mouth resuscitation. The students were also given time to practice the application of a triangular bandage.

The fair represents a "wrap-up" of knowledge accumulated through the course. Special areas will be set aside within the cafetorium for each phase of the first aid subject. Also on hand will be representatives from the first department of the Air Force Base with their "Resusci-Andy" dummy. In the center of the room, students will demonstrate on mats the procedures they have learned. Each will be given a card on which an injury is named. According to the card received, they will explain and show the proper procedure of first aid for that particular injury.

Storms over wide area

United Press International

Thunderstorms today rumbled across the northern Plains, the central Atlantic coast, the upper Mississippi Valley and parts of northwest Texas and southwest Oklahoma.

Nine tornadoes were reported Sunday —three each in the states of Oklahoma, Texas and Colorado. However, there were no reports of damage or injuries.

Some five inches of rain touched off flash floods through Kentucky's southern Pike County and northern Letcher County during the weekend, causing an estimated $2 million to $3 million in damages.

There were no fatalities reported, but state police continued to search for a motorist believed swept from a pickup truck when a bridge was washed away. Four other persons reported missing earlier were accounted for.

Col. James Heaton, Frankfort, Ky., in charge of disaster and emergency services for the state Department of Military Affairs, said the water had begun to recede late Sunday.

"We have 41 trailers and 27 houses damaged," Heaton said, "and Kentucky (route) 197 is in really bad shape."

County officials Sunday asked for state and federal disaster aid for the two counties.

In Illinois today, residents were warned they could again expect ozone levels to soar. The state Environmental Protection Agency issued a health advisory because of high ozone levels Saturday and Sunday.

Flash flood warnings were issued late Sunday for a portion of southern West Virginia. Heavy weekend rains forced the evacuation of 250 persons in the little town of Pound in southwestern Virginia.

In South Dakota's Mellette County Sunday night, three inches of rain fell in one hour.

Portugal manhunt for plotters against left-wing government

LISBON (UPI) — The armed forces ordered a nationwide manhunt today for plotters allegedly involved in a right-wing conspiracy to overthrow Portugal's left-wing government.

A government communique said Portuguese troops have arrested more than 20 soldiers and civilians in connection with the alleged plot.

The search came as the ruling Armed Forces Movement opened a controversial meeting to discuss plans for a revolutionary tribunal to try political cases.

Military sources predicted the meeting would pit extreme leftist officers dominating the government against moderates opposed to increased communist influence.

The government-run national radio said Sunday a left-wing artillery unit discovered a "vast fascist organization with links to determined foreign agencies and restricted cells in some military units."

"We are in contact with other colleagues in units all over the country and they are keeping vigilance," hourly radio broadcasts said. "We appeal to all people to keep vigilance and help discover more reactionaries."

Posters plastered throughout Lisbon said a leader of the conservative Social Democratic Center party and a Supreme Court judge were among the suspects.

About 150 left-wing demonstrators marched on the American embassy Sunday, calling for the expulsion of U.S. Ambassador Frank Carlucci and an unnamed Central Intelligence Agency agent.

The protesters painted a red swastika on the embassy wall and pasted up posters demanding the arrest of two moderate army officers in suburban units.

Witnesses reported unusual military activity on the outskirts of the capital, but an official spokesman refused comment on reports the armed forces were on full alert.

The military government, which reported putting down a right-wing coup attempt last March, has moved steadily left since coming to power a year ago.

The government held a nationwide election last month on the first anniversary of the coup that ended a half-century of right-wing dictatorship.

The moderate Socialist and Popular Democratic parties led the voting for delegates to a constitutional convention. The Communists finished a distant third.

Mrs. Ford tells of reaction

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Offering an inside glimpse of President Ford's handling of the Mayaguez incident, First Lady Betty Ford said her husband reacted with the feeling that this was "certainly one problem he didn't really need" after the U.S. evacuation of Vietnam.

Mrs. Ford provided that view Sunday at the outset of a four-day visit to the West Coast, her first major solo trip since recovering from breast cancer.

She denied her trip was intended to put aside rumors that her health might interfere with her husband's plans to seek the presidency in 1976. She said that her health is "marvelous" and that she will campaign for him.

Pro, con busing rallies

BOSTON (UPI) — Proponents and opponents of busing mustered thousands for separate weekend rallies in this city which has become the focus of the busing controversy.

The two groups met just blocks apart.

For the NAACP, it was commemoration Saturday of an historic 21-year-old Supreme Court ruling that said segregated schools were unconstitutional.

For members of ROAR, a Boston-based, antibusing group whose motto is "Restore Our Alienated Rights," it was their first national convention.

The busing advocates, numbering between 12,000 and 15,000 marchers, heard speakers strongly support federal Judge W. Arthur Garrity's order to desegregate the Boston school system.

Under a striped, canopied platform shading speakers from bright sun, NAACP Boston chapter President Thomas Atkins discussed the early 60s civil rights struggle in the south and Boston violence-plagued busing experience.

"While helping bring soul to the cradle of the Confederacy, the cradle of liberty was being sacked right here in Boston," he said. "Somebody walked right in and stole liberty from that cradle and put a little monster in its place."

Atkins said, "We took the only course left open to us. We went back to the federal courtrooms which had purged the cradle of the confederacy.

"We told the federal court that we had found our cradle of liberty being occupied by the product of constitutional thalidomide."

Atheist Madalyn O'Hair charges government spying

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) — For more than a decade, atheist Madalyn Murray O'Hair says, the FBI and Secret Service have been spying on her crusade to remove governmental support for organized religion.

Since May 12, 1964 —a year after she won a landmark Supreme Court ruling banning compulsory prayer in public schools —Mrs. O'Hair said, the two federal agencies have kept her under surveillance.

She showed UPI copies of documents, obtained from an associate of columnist Jack Anderson, indicating the FBI and Secret Service kept track of her actions and movements. Some of the surveillance information came from her husband, she said.

"What am I doing that they need to have a file on me?" she said Sunday. "I sure as hell think the people of the United States need to know this is going on."

A spokesman for Anderson said in Washington the columnist has secured FBI files on several persons and has been furnishing copies to the subjects if they request.

Mrs. O'Hair said her husband had been an FBI agent "for 20 years" and that the files included some information which he gave to the Austin police department.

O'Hair was not available for comment. In Washington, an FBI spokesman said the FBI had never employed O'Hair in any capacity, but refused to confirm or deny that Mrs. O'Hair had been under surveillance.

"We wouldn't comment on it and wouldn't want that construed as the idea that we do or do not have anything on her," he said.

One of the documents called Mrs. O'Hair "dangerous." Another bore the title of the "subversive branch" of the Secret Service.

'Sailor' wins top poker game

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (UPI) — Fortified by his $210,000 winnings from the World Series of Poker, Brian "Sailor" Roberts took his girl friend Bea Tudor show-hopping to celebrate his triumph in the winner-take-all game.

"It was one of the hardest tournaments I've ever played in," Roberts said, rocking back and forth in his chair after the match. Roberts said he misplaced his glasses before the game, but apparently the loss didn't bother him as he played the winning round without them.

Roberts, wearing a blue green shirt tucked into his black trousers, the button near the belt unbuttoned, sat with one foot curled up under him. A hole in the sole of the shoe stuck out as Roberts posed for pictures with his $210,000 winnings —stacked on a silver tray like a pile of coldcuts.

The final round in the smoke-filled Horeshoe Club casino began at 4:00 p.m. Saturday with only three of the original 21 gamblers who put up $10,000 each to enter the tournament left in play.

When the three Texans sat down, Roberts had $128,000, Bob Hooks had $54,000 and "Dapper" Crandall Addington had $27,400.

Hooks was fortified by a stock of his favorite $2 cigars, wrapped in a plastic baggie to preserve the moisture of the tobacco.

Addington tossed in the towel at 6:20 p.m.

Mother dead; baby born

VAN NUYS, Calif. (UPI) — Kathryn Viramontes gave birth to a boy, but she didn't live long enough to see her fourth child.

Mrs. Viramontes, 28, was found dead by her 6-year-old daughter, Angela, Saturday morning.

A coroner's autopsy said she had been stabbed in the neck and the unborn child she had been carrying was cut out by a Caesarean-type incision on her abdomen.

The autopsy said Mrs. Viramontes bled to death from the cut.

Norma Armistead, 44, Hollywood, who reportedly was a friend of the victim, was in custody today on charges of murder.

She was arrested with the baby Saturday at Kaiser Permanente Hospital, where she was employed as an obstetrical nurse. She told police she had given birth to the child at home.

The unnamed baby, who weighed 6½ pounds, was was listed in excellent condition, "the healthiest baby" at Children's Hospital.

Investigators said the incision on the victim's abdomen was a "professional job, done by someone who knew what they were doing."

The two other Viramontes children, besides Angela, are Richard, 8, and Deborah, 4.

Police said they have not discovered a motive for the slaying.

Warrior bench crew wears down Bullets

LANDOVER, Md. (UPI) — It was westward home today for the surprising Golden State Warriors who are relishing a quick advantage over the favored Washington Bullets with a 101-95 victory in the opening game of their NBA championship series.

The Warriors accomplished their third come-from-behind playoff triumph Sunday by rallying from 16 points behind to win on Washington's home court. The next two games will be played at San Francisco's Cow Palace Tuesday and Friday before the showdown returns east.

A glum Mike Riordan summed it up for the Bullets before their departure to California: "The win is a big plus for them. Now they've got the schedule working for them."

Golden State coach Al Attles agreed after the Warriors surged to victory in the final period when rookie reserve guard Phil Smith racked up 10 of his 20 points.

"We've eliminated any home court advantage in this series," he told newsmen, then pointing to the ceiling, added: "Our guys are this high."

The Warriors who twice came from behind to eliminate the Chicago Bulls in the last two games of the western conference title playoffs trailed at halftime 54-40 as they shot only 36 per cent from the field compared to 51.2 per cent for Washington.

"But even though we were 14 points down, I was optimistic," Attles said. "I reminded them they'd been behind before and that they should play good defense and get the ball down the court fast."

"There are no 15-point plays in this game," he continued. "You can never make it all up on one spectacular play. You just chip, chip, chip away until their lead is gone."

The tactic worked as the Warriors pulled to within a point of the Bullets at the end of the third quarter, then steadily drew ahead in the final period.

The contribution from the Golden State bench was a major factor in the last half even while Rick Barry led all scorers with 24 points. Smith came off the bench when starter Butch Beard got into early foul trouble. In addition to his 20 points, he blocked three shots, three assists and came up with seven rebounds at both ends of the court.

He and four other Golden State benchers—Dekker Dickey, Charles Dudley, George Johnson and Jeff Mullins—produced 44 points compared to only 15 from Washington's reserves.

Attles commented: "We think we probably proved today that we can play with anyone in our league. Our bench did it today just like they did it in our playoffs against Seattle and Chicago.

"The bench and our patience, our keeping our head and not panicking—that's what's making us a good team."

Bullet coach K. C. Jones credited the Golden State defense for the turn around of events in the nationally televised event—the first in a best of seven series. "They pressured us out of position," he said. "They were aggressive as hell in the second half."

He noted that in the later stages of the contest, the Warriors successfully double-teamed Washington's high scorer, Elvin Hayes, who wound up with 29 points.

Brett's bat and pitching defeats LA

United Press International

When Ken Brett has his "best stuff" going for him, most National Leaguers agree he's tough to handle.

Brett's best stuff isn't an assortment of curves, fastballs and changeups but rather his bat, and when he's swinging it with authority as he did Sunday it seems to make him a better pitcher and thus double-trouble for opponents.

The Pittsburgh Pirates' lefthander was a big problem for the Los Angeles Dodgers Sunday as he collected three hits, including two doubles, and tossed a two-hitter while leading his club to a 7-2 triumph.

Brett, raising his season's batting average to .333, climaxed a four-run sixth inning outburst with a run-scoring double and also scored another run while limiting the Dodgers to just two hits—both by Dave Lopes. Lopes led off the game with a single but the Dodgers didn't get another hit until the ninth when Lopes homered.

Brett, now 3-2, walked five and preferred to talk about his hitting. He hit .310 last season and the three hits gave him 80 —in 287 at bats—for his big league career.

"Actually, my bat was working best," Brett said. "I've been taking a lot of lip lately from the other pitchers on our club because I've been in a slump (he was 2 for 11 before Sunday). They won't have much to say to me now.

"It wasn't the best game I've thrown. I'm not in the groove. I'm walking too many guys but I can't put my finger on why. It's just something I'll have to work out.

"The Dodgers have always given me trouble," he added. "It was nice to reverse the trend."

Giants 2, Cardinals 0

Jim Barr allowed only two hits, both to Lou Brock, and faced only two batters over the minimum in pitching the Giants to victory over the Cardinals. Barr, boosting his record to 4-3, has now blanked the Cardinals for 24 1-3 consecutive innings dating back to last season.

Phillies 5, Braves 1

Rookie Tom Underwood tossed a four-hitter as the Phillies notched their seventh triumph in a row and 12th consecutive victory at home. Greg Luzinski and Mike Schmidt collected run-scoring doubles in the third inning to get Underwood the only runs he needed in gaining his fifth victory against three losses.

Reds 6, Expos 1

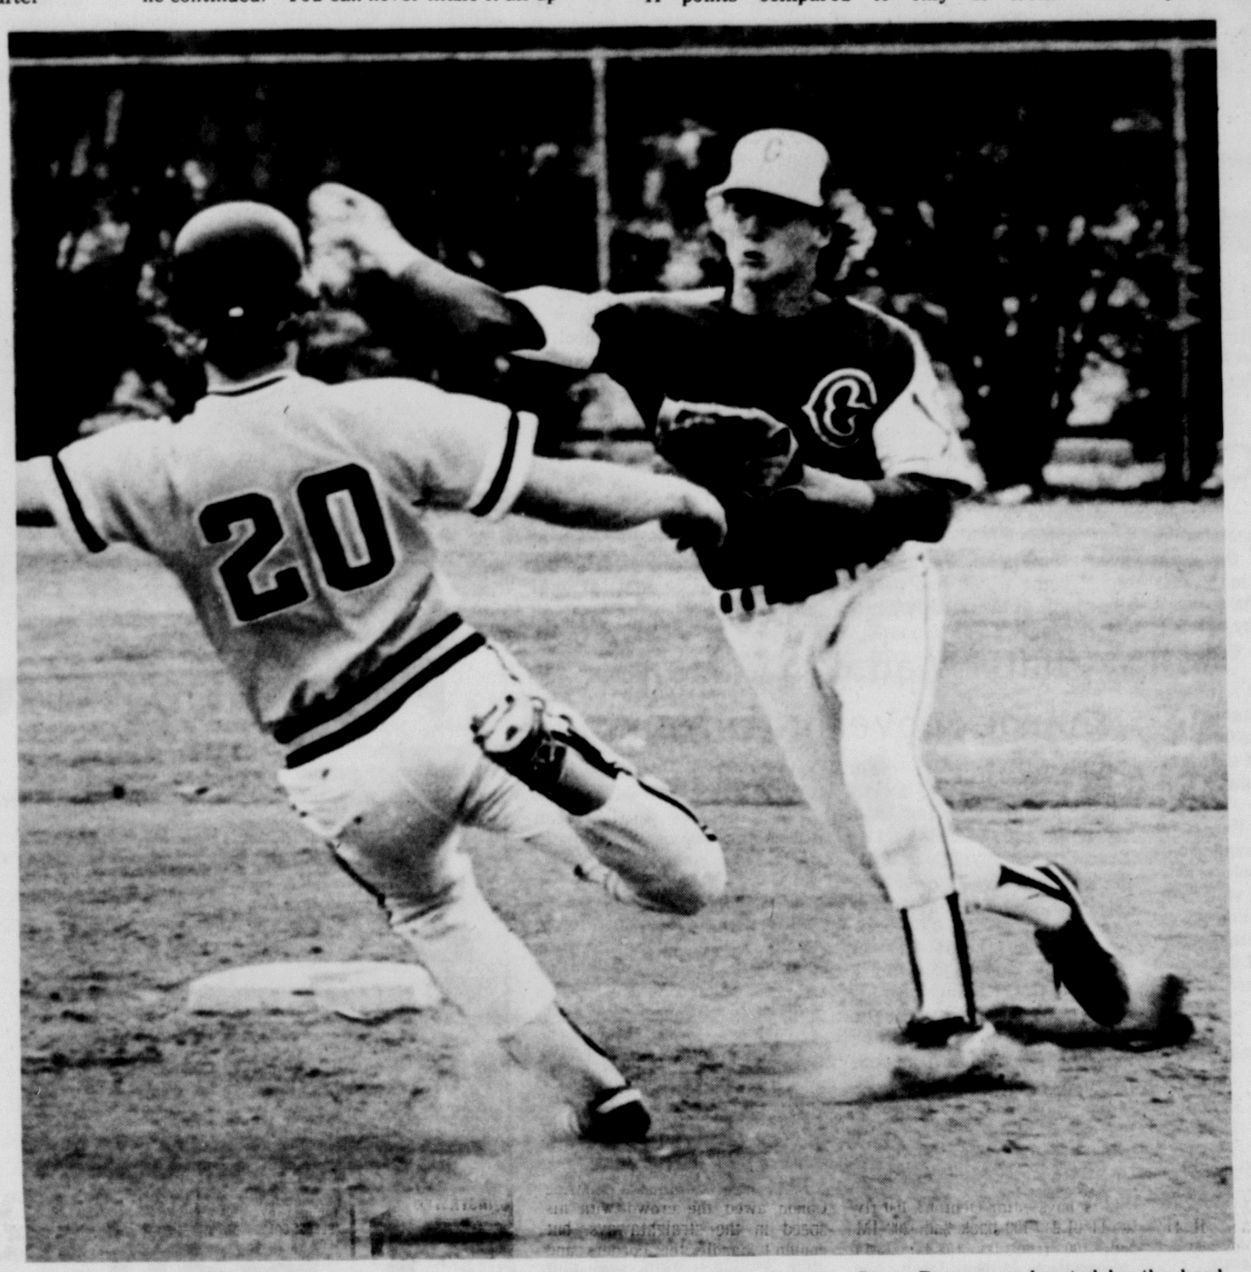
Gary Nolan allowed only four hits and Pete Rose and George Foster homered to pace the Reds to victory over the Expos. Dave McNally was charged with his fifth loss in eight decisions. Mike Jorgensen homered for Montreal.

Astros 12, Mets 7

Bob Watson drove in five runs with his seventh home run, a three-run double and an infield grounder to pace Doug Konieczny to his second major league triumph. The Astros, losers in nine of their last 11 games, scored nine runs in in the first three innings.

Cubs 3, Padres 2

Reserve first baseman Adrian Garrett hit a three-run sixth inning homer to give the Cubs a victory over the Padres. Ray Burris went 8 1-3 innings to pick up his fifth win in seven decisions.



RALLY KILLER. Culver City shortstop Steve Benson, undaunted by the hard-sliding Johnny Null, fires to first to complete a double play against Cabrillo Friday. It was one of two smooth double plays turned in by Benson and secondbaseman Chuck Menzhuber, and it helped the Centaurs to a 7-3 win.

Conqs run out of coal in CIF

By SCOTT OSTLER

The Culver City Centaurs justified their reputation as a team of opportunists Friday as they eliminated the Cabrillo Conqs from the CIF Southern Section 3-A playoffs, 7-3, in a game at Culver City.

The Northern League's other representative, Santa Maria, edged Torrance 1-0 on Mike Mohr's two-hitter and an unearned run.

Cabrillo had poured on the coal in the final three weeks of the league season, scrapping to a second place finish and a CIF berth. But that fire was gone Friday.

They couldn't come up with the clutch hitting, pitching or defense that had lately characterized their team. In three of the first five innings, the Conqs' final out was a called third strike.

Cabrillo starting pitcher Carlton Roberts struck out the side in the first and third, but he also walked four batters, and all four came around to score, knocking the Conqs' ace out of the box in the fourth inning.

The Centaurs played like the league champs they are. Bob Corzel, who went the route, walked just one batter. The Culver City infield turned double plays in the third and sixth innings.

In the fourth inning Centaur catcher Lee Silver picked Ray Dahlmann off first base and then threw out a pinch-runner trying to steal.

While the Conqs outhit the Centaurs 7-5, Cabrillo's fireworks were concentrated in a futile seventh-inning rally.

Prior to that inning, Corzel had allowed just three scattered singles.

Culver City got all the runs it needed in the fourth inning, when everything seemed to fall apart for the Conqs.

Shortstop Steve Benson, the Ocean League's co-MVP, led off the bottom of the fourth with a line double to left. Roberts walked Lane, then gave up a bloop single to short center that could have been handled by a more alert defense.

Apparently rattled, Roberts wild-pitched home a run, walked another batter, and threw three balls to the next batter. Eric Cannon took over and threw just two pitches, including ball four, then gave way to Johnny Null, who finished up the game.

Null would have escaped that fourth inning trailing just 4-0. But with two down, substitute secondbaseman Mike Morrow dropped a pop fly. That accounted for two more runs and a 6-0 Culvery City lead.

The hosts got another run in the fifth on an error and a two-out single.

Down 7-0, the Conqs fought back with three runs in the seventh. With one out they loaded the bases on back-to-back singles by Bill Watters and Blain Nelson, and an error at second on Chuck Menzhuber.

Kelly Hubbard's blooper dropped just behind third base for a run-scoring single. After Kirk Dalton struck out, Null lined a two-run double to right-center.

Roberts, inserted back into the game to hit, ended the game by flying out to right.

The Conqs can look forward to next year. Five starters return, including two of the three leading hitters (Dahlmann and Roberts). The entire pitching staff, except for Null, will be back.

Cabrillo finished the season with a 12½-10½ record. The Centaurs are 16-6.

Clarke stars as Flyers win 2-1

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Like most teams, the Philadelphia Flyers have such nicknames for each other as "The Hound, Big Bird, The Hammer, The Chief," but they ought to start calling Bobby Clarke, "The Gnat."

As usual, Clarke was buzzing all over the ice Sunday as the defending Stanley Cup champions defeated the Buffalo Sabres, 2-1 to take a 2-0 advantage in the National Hockey League finals.

On the Flyers' first goal at 8:24 of the second period, Clarke passed from behind the net to Reggie Leach who pushed it in past goalie Gerry Desjardins for the first score in the nationally televised game.

Then after the Sabres had tied at it 2:18 of the third period on a goal by Jerry Korab, Buffalo's promised "big surprise" of the game, Clarke, was at it again.

On a Flyers power play after the Sabres' Don Luce had gone off at 6:15 for hooking, Clarke again was in back of the Sabres net.

Olympic cost feared up

MONTREAL (UPI) — Montreal Mayor Jean Drapeau leaves this week for a top-level Olympics conference in Europe, fearful wildcat strikes at the 1976 site will increase an already forecasted $250 million summer games deficit.

The 2,000 workers at the Olympic park have joined some 10,000 men at sites throughout Quebec in protesting government plans and subsequent legislation to clean up scandal-ridden construction unions.

The Montreal Olympics Organizing Committee (COJO) said last week, however, that the Olympic village site would reopen today and the main stadium complex on Thursday, with police providing protection for workers who want to return. Both have been closed since May 8.

"I hope (the walkouts) won't have an effect on time, but they will have a definite effect on cost," Drapeau said Sunday. "Each day without work cost money. What has not been done will have to be done at extra cost. But with regular production from Canadian workers, it shouldn't be too high.

Latest estimates, released last December in a city-commissioned engineering study, put Olympic costs at $653 million —with $580 million for construction and $73 million for administration.

US team flexes muscles

KWANGCHOW (CANTON CITY), China (UPI) — A little more of that U.S. goodwill in track and field activities and the Chinese may suggest trying something else, like, say, ping pong.

For the first time ever, an American track and field team competed against one from the People's Republic of China here Sunday, with the idea being this would be purely a friendly meet with no points being kept.

It wasn't, because the U.S. team swept 14 of the 15 events despite the fact the 10,000 capacity East Stadium cinder track was wet and treacherous by rains which delayed the start of the meet twice for nearly two hours.

The Chinese team is composed of mostly second-string talents from their central and southern provinces. So, as far as the American were concerned, they felt like a big league hitter batting against little league pitching. They were competing more against their own teammates than against the over-matched Chinese.

"I was running just enough to win, and I was satisfied with that," said veteran Olympic hurdler Willie Davenport of Baton Rouge, La, who won his 110 meter event in 14.2 seconds.

Tanner outlasts Aussie

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (UPI) — The Australian-American tennis rivalry of the future—in the Davis Cup at Wimbledon and at Forest Hills—had its first major battle in the final of the Alan King Classic Sunday, and first blood was drawn by 23-year-old six-footer Roscoe Tanner from Lookout Mountain, Tenn.

But Tanner was bloodied himself in gaining a gut 5-7, 7-5, 7-6 victory over Ross Case, a scrambler and retriever cast from the same mold as his noted countryman, Ken Roswall.

Case, at 5-8, is only an inch taller than Roswall, but in the windless 90-plus heat of Sunday, he chased down everything the flame-throwing Tanner whipped over the net, only to wind up losing 11-9 in the final set tiebreaker after failing to capitalize on three match points of his own.

So intensely had the match been waged over two hours and 15 minutes that Caesars Palace president William Weinberger threw another $15,000 into the $150,000 pot so that both Tanner and Case collected $30,000 each.

Trojans dominate meet

PULLMAN, Wash. (UPI) — USC has dispelled any doubts that it is the dominant force in Pacific-8 Conference track.

The Trojans scored a commanding win in the conference track and field championships the past weekend by amassing 152 points in the two-day meet. They finished well ahead of runnerup UCLA and its 115 points. Host Washington State was third with 96 points.

It was the second straight conference championship for USC and a more comfortable win than last year when the Trojans finished just four points ahead of the runnerup Bruins.

"How in the world can you single out one individual," USC Coach Vern Wolffe said. "It was a great team effort and there was a tremendous amount of pull-through performances."

The Trojans demonstrated their strength by taking firsts in nine of 21 events, including 12 finishes in the 100, 220 and 440 hurdles. The other first-place finishes came in the 440, triple jump, discus, long jump and 440 and mile relays.

But while USC competed impressively as a team, there were standout performances, particularly in the case of sprinter James Gilkes, who won the 100 (9.4) and 220 (20.5) yard dashes and anchored the winning 440 relay team.

Trainer raps bad track

BALTIMORE (UPI) — Foolish Pleasure, runner-up to Master Derby in the 100th Preakness Stakes, was shipped to New York today to begin preparing for the Belmont Stakes June 7, but not before his trainer, Leroy Jolley, took a parting shot at Pimlico Race Course officials.

Finishing second by one length in Saturday's Preakness cost Foolish Pleasure, the 1¾ length winner of the Kentucky Derby earlier this month, any chance he had of becoming only the 10th Triple Crown champion in history and Jolley blamed the condition of the track for only the second loss in the horse's 13-race career.

"Foolish Pleasure never ran on a track as bad as this," fumed Jolley while talking to newsmen Sunday just outside the horse's barn at Pimlico.

Ryan gives Angel sprinters day of rest

United Press International

Manager Dick Williams and the California Angels aren't always referring to Nolan Ryan when they talk about speed.

They haven't forgotten they have the fastest pitcher in the game's history. It's just that they've discovered they are one of the fastest running teams of modern times —perhaps even in the 75-year history of the American League.

It was that speed about which Williams talked Sunday even after Ryan had turned in a dazzling two-hit performance over 8 2-3 innings to beat the Baltimore Orioles 5-1 for his eighth win against one loss this season. Williams pointed to the fact that the Angels have stolen 67 bases in 37 games—a pace, projected over the season, which would surpass the AL season-mark of 288 set by the 1913 Washington Senators.

"This is the youngest club I've ever managed and the one with the most speed," said Williams. "As soon as it gets itself some confidence it'll be a better club."

Mickey Rivers leads the California "road runners" with 22 steals followed by Morris Nettles' 12, Orlando Ramirez' nine, Tommy Harper's eight and Gerry Remy's seven. It's the type of running which keeps constant pressure on rivals' defenses because it isn't concentrated in one or two players.

The "road runners" took a day off Sunday as the fitful Ryan pitched no-hit ball until Al Bumbry's bunt single in the sixth inning and wound up yielding two hits in 8 2-3 innings. Williams summoned Don Kirkwood to get the last putout after Tommy Davis's double drove in the Orioles' run in the ninth and Ryan was obviously exhausted.

"It's the most I've walked in one game this year and maybe last year," said Ryan. "I usually try to execute better than that but you go out there to win and that's what we did. With our speed, I think that if our bullpen jells and our starting rotation stays healthy, we have a shot at winning our division."

Yankees 9 A's 1

Jim Hunter pitched a four-hitter against his former teammates, raising his season record to 5-4 behind a nine-hit New York attack which included a homer by Thurman Munson and two hits each by Jim Mason and Sandy Alomar.

Red Sox 4 Royals 2

Bernie Carbo drove in all four Red Sox' runs with a pair of homers as Boston snapped a five-game losing streak. Rick Wise went the distance with a six-hitter for his fourth win while Nelson Briles, kayoed in the sixth, lost his second decision against four vicories.

Indians 7 White Sox 6

George Hendrick drove in three runs with a double and his sixth homer as the Indians dealt the White Sox' Wilbur Wood his seventh defeat compared to two victories. Gaylord Perry received credit for his fifth win although tagged for six runs and 11 hits in 5 2-3 innings. Deron Johnson and Boog Powell also homered.

Twins 6 Brewers 0

Rookie Jim Hughs pitched his second straight four-hitter for the Twins, who pressed the 23-year-old righthander into starting service last week because of injuries. Steve Braun and Larry Hisle homered for the Twins. Hughes, now 4-1, struck out six and walked six.

Rangers 7 Tigers 6

Tom Grieve, given a "life" when rightfielder Leon Roberts dropped his pop fly in foul territory, singled home Willie Davis with two out in the 11th inning to give the Rangers their triumph. The Rangers came from behind three times in the game, tying the score at 6-6 with a three-run rally in the 10th inning.

Bayi's 3:51 a new record

KINGSTON, Jamaica (UPI) — Filbert Bayi of Tanzania is the new world record holder for the mile run but he says the best is yet to come.

Bayi cut one-tenth of a second off the eight-year-old mile record of Jim Ryun of the United States when he clocked 3:51 flat Saturday night at the International Freedom Games.

"I am the happiest man at this Freedom Games and everyone at home will be very proud of what I've done," said the 21-year-old Bayi, the first black man ever to hold the mile record. "But it was just a warmup for me for the Olympics in Montreal next year."

Bayi finished 1.2 seconds and 10 yards ahead of Marty Liquori of the U.S., spoiling Liquori's bid for revenge against the slim Tanzanian. Bayi, who also holds the world record at 1,500 meters, had beaten Liquori in his U.S. debut last year.

Hall wins mat tourney

Mark Hall earned a shot at an upcoming tourney to pick a Southern California team to compete in the Junior World Competition, when he won the 163-pound championship of a qualifying tournament Saturday.

Hall went undefeated in five matches, including wins over the CIF 157-pound champ and a junior college state runner-up.

If the Cabrillo junior can win the Southern Cal tourney (for ages 16-20), he will be invited to a one-week camp to prepare for the national tournament, the winners of which will compete in Bulgaria.

In 14-15-year-old age-bracket competition, Chris Hall (4-0) won the 165-pound championship, Mark Bowser (2-0) took the 195-pound title, and Jim Filarsky (1-1) was second at 195.

Cabrillo pair make CIF

Miler Bob Zorich and half-miler Steve Mosby of the Cabrillo track team qualified for the 3-A CIF finals at Friday's CIF prelims at El Modena High.

Zorich ran a 4:22.4 to finish third in his heat, and Mosby ran the 880 in 1:58.6 to place third in his heat.

The top three in each heat qualified for the finals which will be held Friday at El Modena.

Lompoc's Jim Moore finished just out of the money in both hurdles events. In both races Moore's fourth place time was faster than a third place time in another heat.

The Valley teams qualified for a total of six spots in the frosh-soph finals.

Cabrillo pole-vaulter, David Harpster, half-miler Bob Tapia, and 220 man Ron Doig each qualified, and the Conqs' mile relay team of Mike Miller, Tracy Ingram, Tapia and Doig ran a 3:32.9.

Lompoc high jumper Jeff Jones and hurdler Victor Anderson were the Braves' qualifiers. Anderson ran a 16.0 in the highs to win his heat.

Judo results

Jimmy Johnston and Barney Foster of Lompoc competed yesterday in the Junior Age and Weight Judo Championships in Los Angeles. Both represented the Lompoc American Legion Judo Dojo.

Johnston, age 11, won five of seven matches to earn a tie for fourth place and a possible alternate position on the Southern California team in the National Junior Judo Championships.

Foster, 12, won two of his four matches.

The local judo club will send its girls to Los Angeles next Sunday to participate in the semi-annual competitive exams for higher rank.

For information on the local club, call Ron Johnston (736-1732) or Gus Piperakis (733-2091).

Ron Geer's blue bar hen (VAB 1061 Au 1973) hit a speed of 45.063 mph and came home about 20 minutes ahead of the next bird. It was the second year in a row Geer's bird has won this long, hard race.

Speedway

Cliff Vose of Santa Maria won the 25-lap super stock main event Saturday night at the Santa Maria Speedway, with Ray Marroquin second and Lompoc's Bob Taylor third.

Mike Mitchell of Santa Maria was leading until he ran into a cloud of smoke midway through the big race and ran head-on into a wall.

In the super modified action, Ace Canon awed the crowd with his speed in the straightaways, but couldn't handle the corners and finished seventh. Gibby Perine of Ventura won the trophy dash, heat race and main event. Frank Burgin was second and Roy Guy Jr. third.

In the super mini action, Lloyd Gray led fellow Santa Marian Emmett Brown to the checkered flag, with Roscoe Burris of Santa Barbara third.

Next Saturday will feature a Rookie Race, along with super stocks and super mods. On May 26 the Speedway will welcome the CRA sprint cars.

Since the Surgeon General's warning about the dangers of cigarette smoking back in 1964, the Federal Govt. has spent over 3 million dollars to discourage the use of the filthy weed. So far the result of that effort is that U.S. citizens are puffing more than ever. In the meantime, Washington has been pumping over 15 million a year in subsidies to encourage Southern farmers to grow more tobacco! This is because of the fat revenue in tax dollars to Uncle Sam for cigarette sales. Maybe the warning on every pack should be changed to: "Smoking is dangerous—but keep it up—your Govt. needs the money!"

Bill Casper wins at New Orleans

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — The omens were not good.

Billy Casper, along with nine of his 10 children, were sick the first part of last week and what he didn't need most in the world was to play four days of golf.

He tried to cancel his appearance at the New Orleans Open, but tournament officials never returned his telephone calls.

He arrived in New Orleans on a midnight flight from Salt Lake City, got a little rest Wednesday and played the first round Thursday. During the round he said he felt weak, but thought he could continue.

He led the first round, and then the second, and then the third and when it was all over Sunday, Billy Casper had won his 51st pro golf tournament — the $150,000 New Orleans Open —finishing with a 17-under 271.

He won the tournament with some of the most consistent scoring he's put together in many years. The difference between his best and his worst round was only four strokes—a 66 on Saturday and a closing round of 70. He shot a 67 Thursday and a 68 Friday.

He won the tournament —the second time he has won the New Orleans Open —with a two-stroke advantage over Englishman Peter Oosterhuis. The win was worth $30,000. The last time he won here, in 1958, he collected $2,800.

"We've come a long way, baby," he said, hoisting the winner's check.

Casper, who started the final round four strokes ahead of Oosterhuis, shot even par the first four holes Sunday, bogeyed the fifth, birdied the sixth, bogied the ninth, birdied the 11th, 12th and 13th and shot even par from the 14th through the 18th.

Lanny Wadkins finished third at 12 under, followed by Bob Lynn at 11 under, and Steve Melnyk, Don January and Larry Hinson all at 10 under.

"It was harder playing today because the putter let me down," Casper said.

Merced beauty selected as Miss U.S.A. for '75

NIAGARA FALLS, N.Y. (UPI) — "Ever since I was a little girl," said Summer Bartholomew, "my grandfather would sit me on his knee and tell me I'd be a beauty winner."

Her grandfather's prophecy came true Saturday for Miss Bartholomew, 23, of Merced, Calif., when she was crowned Miss U.S.A. for 1975 at a nationally televised pageant.

Miss Bartholomew, a tall, brown-eyed, brunette who was named after a comic strip character, was chosen over 50 other entrants in the nation's largest beauty-only pageant to represent the United States at the Miss Universe pageant July 19 in the Central America country of El Salvador.

She began her reign as the 24th Miss U.S.A. Sunday by going on a "breathtaking" boat ride below Niagara Falls, throwing out the first pitch at a Little League baseball game and attending a coronation dinner in her honor.

The new Miss U.S.A. said her mother named her "Summer" after a character in the Steve Canyon comic strip. But she said she wasn't named until six months after her birth Nov. 20, 1951.

Miss Bartholomew is in her last term studying tele-communications at Merced Junior College. She says she may have to take incompletes in her courses "until I can get back there and take the tests."

She said she has a third-class radio license and plans a career in broadcasting, possibly in "some type of news commentary."

The four runners-up in the contest were Miss Alabama, Pamela Renee Flowers, 19, of Headland; Miss North Carolina, Constance Anne Dorn, 21, of Kinston; Miss Florida, Mary Margaret Hume, 20, of Holly Hills, and Miss Texas, Aundie Evers, 19, of El Paso.

THE BETTER HALF By Barnes

"You're all shaved and dressed and you've had breakfast. Okay, now here's the bad news — it's time to wake up and go to work."

Patty's fiance may testify at trial

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — The attorney for a Symbionese Liberation Army "soldier" on trial for murder says he wants Patricia Hearst's fiance to testify for his client.

Alameda County Public Defender James Jenner, defending Russell Little, said he would call Stephen Weed in an attempt to impeach the testimony of a prosecution witness.

Little, 25, and Joseph Remiro, 28, are charged with shooting Foster to death during a nighttime ambush. They are also on trial for the attempted murder of Deputy Superintendent Robert W. Blackburn.

Jenner said Weed could testify that at the time of Miss Hearst's kidnaping they were living only two blocks from the Berkeley home of Christopher Thompson, an SLA associate, later turned informer.

He said the proximity of Thompson's home to the Hearst apartment could discredit his earlier testimony for the prosecution.

Brown plans to fire coast chairman

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. will fire the chairman of the North Coast Regional Coastal Zone Commission, who was accused of raising campaign funds for Republican gubernatorial candidate Houston Flournoy, according to the governor's office.

Press Secretary Bill Stall confirmed Saturday that Chairman John Mayfield had been informed Brown intends to name his successor on the commission this week.

A hearing is scheduled Wednesday in Mendocino County Superior Court on a suit filed by Mayfield challenging Brown's authority to fire him.

During the general election campaign, Brown accused Mayfield, who served as Flournoy's north coast campaign chairman, of improperly soliciting $3,400 in contributions from employes of two lumber companies.

Mayfield denied the charges.

Last month, Brown ousted Donald Bright, chairman of the South Coast Regional Commission, who hosted a campaign fundraiser for Brown during the general election.

Lawmakers in special session

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — The California legislature plunges headlong today into a special session on medical malpractice insurance and a crucial hearing on Gov. Edmund G. Brown's "fragile" farm labor relations bill.

Another massive Capitol demonstration was planned by rival unions as the Senate Finance Committee considers the farm labor bill. The Teamsters announced they would turn out 10,000 persons while Cesar Chavez' United Farm Workers' Union is expecting 5,000.

A similar demonstration last week yielded more than 2,000 flag-waving, chanting Teamster and UFW members and was marked by eight arrests, sporadic fist-fighting and damage to hearing room furnishings.

The Teamsters and the Building Trades Council, AFL-CIO, have mounted increasing pressure on lawmakers to amend Brown's bill and seem to be picking up some support among Democratic lawmakers, notably Assembly Speaker Leo T. McCarthy.

But Brown has resisted the moves. "I like it the way it is," said the governor, adding that he was worried the changes would shatter his "delicate coalition" of Chavez and major growers.

The Teamsters bitterly object to a provision that would invalidate their 400 existing contracts with growers while the building trades union and the California Labor Federation fear the bill would enable farm workers to perform agricultural construction.

Spurred by a doctor's walkout that has spread to more than 100 hospitals statewide, Brown called the special session on the malpractice crisis to begin at 1 p.m.

Brown said Saturday he was vetoing a bill that would pool insurance companies writing malpractice insurance, because the measure did not go far enough.

The bill, by Assemblyman Alister McAlister, D-San Jose, would have created a pool of companies to offer the insurance.

"Pallitives which divert attention from unpleasant realities are not in the public interest," he said.

In calling the special session, Brown urged lawmakers to adopt sweeping reforms to solve the problem of soaring malpractice insurance rates. But the move did not immediately result in doctors ending their walkout.

Brown offered a nine-point program, including periodic exams to assure that doctors' training is up-to-date, putting a majority of "public members" on the state Board of Medical Examiners and provisions making it easier to strip the licenses of doctors for "lack of competency."

Other proposals called for a "Medical Peace Corps" to serve needy Californians, restrictions on lawyers' fees in malpractice cases and a panel to arbitrate malpractice disputes.

Meantime, lawmakers are still struggling in the first special session called by Brown in February to put the state into the housing finance business. Two similar bills providing $950 million in housing bonds face their last committee tests this week.

The Senate Finance Committee will consider one bill (AB1) by Assemblyman Peter Chacon, D-San Diego, on Monday while the Assembly Ways and Means Committee plans to take up the second measure by Sen. George Zenovich, D-Fresno on Tuesday.

Both the malpractice and housing special sessions run concurrently with the regular two-year session.

The advantage of a special session is that any bills passed could go into effect swiftly instead of waiting until Jan. 1 as most bills do in the regular session.

Finance Director Roy Bell on Tuesday will disclose a long-awaited revised forecast on the governor's $11.3 billion budget, telling lawmakers how much rising welfare costs and inflation have eaten into the projected $574.2 million surplus.

"We didn't anticipate we'd be as low as we are right now," Bell said, indicating the surplus had dwindled substantially.

Poles could lose trawler

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The Polish government could lose its 278-foot trawler Kalmar seized by the Coast Guard for fishing within U.S territorial waters off central California.

The Coast Guard Cutter Modoc on patrol off Monterey ordered the vessel into San Francisco Saturday and it tied up near Fisherman's Wharf, awaiting court disposition in the case.

A civil forfeiture petitions was readied today for filing in U.S. District Court, according to U.S. Attorney James Browning. He said a misdemeanor complaint, alleging the Kalmar was hauling in hake 10 miles from the coastline, was also being prepared.

The charges carried a maximum $100,000 fine and the possibility the U.S. government could seize the ship and sell it along with its cargo.

The Kalmar was the first Polish vessel ever seized by the U.S. government and the first Communist trawler seized off America's western continental coastline. However, in 1972 three Soviet ships were taken into custody for illegal fishing off Alaska. Their skippers were fined $250,000.

The Kalmar, out of Swinoujscie, Poland, was one of some 70 Russian and Polish ships which have been fishing along the California coast for several weeks. Fleet officials said the ships were merely taking hake, but local fishermen have complained that the Communist ships were also netting salmon in violation of U.S.-Soviet agreements.

The United States considers its territorial boundary to be three miles offshore, but under international law it protects a "contiguous fishing zone" reaching 12 miles out.

"This was simply a violation of the U.S. contiguous fishing zone and that is recognized by the Soviets and us," a Coast Guard spokesman said.

CBS program boss jumps to ABC

NEW YORK (UPI) — Fred Silverman, who masterminded CBS' five straight victories in the annual prime time tv race, is moving to ABC as the network's top program chief, it was announced Sunday.

Silverman, in one of broadcasting's biggest shuffles, replaces Martin Starger as president of ABC Entertainment on June 16. Silverman is now CBS' vice president of programming. Starger leaves ABC June 15 to form his own production company.

Broadcasting sources suggested Silverman's departure from CBS was based on a financial offer "he couldn't refuse." They said another motive was the challenge of taking ABC out its perennial third place finishes with CBS and NBC.

Girl's Lib

Lo, these many days we have preached the values of newspaper route management. For boys. How it helps a boy learn the principles of business. Builds him a nice bank account. Teaches him to deal with people. Even helps him to do better at school. Now, not for boys alone. A girl, too, can have a route of her own — with our newspaper. Some already do. And enjoy the same advantages of fun and profit a boy can get from route management. Equal rights it is. So phone us today, young lady, and talk. There may be a route open for you right in your neighborhood.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) You may do something today out of spite or anger that will be as damaging to you as it is to the other guy.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Something you'll hope to accomplish today will suffer a temporary setback. Don't be dismayed. You'll work it out later.

Oswald: "The bidding of today's hand is almost too good to be true. It started out normally enough with a standard notrump opening and followed with a Stayman two club response, a double by West to ask for a club lead if North became the declarer, a normal two spade rebid by North and a three diamond call by South."

Jim: "North couldn't find a better bid than a raise to four diamonds and South went to four hearts to show his four-card heart suit. North decided to let South gamble the hand out at the four level."

Oswald: "It was a good decision. Five club tricks would have ruined three notrump. Two spades and a club would doom five diamonds to defeat and four hearts made rather easily."

Jim: "It did require some good play by South. Clubs were opened and continued. South discarded a low spade on the second club and another low spade on the third club in order to hang on to his four trumps. Now it didn't matter what was played next. South was sure to take the last ten tricks and score a well deserved rubber bonus."

Legislative supremacy

The shift of power from the executive to the legislative branch of government has come with a terrible swiftness, reeling to the mind. It is yet another historical irony because, although it has been American conservatives who have railed against executive supremacy, it is American liberals who are benefitting from the ascendancy of the legislative branch.

We all know how it happened. It was not the result of an orderly rethinking of government arrangements. It didn't come after three years' study by a huge Hoover Commission, or even from the deliberations of Mr. Hutchins' zoo out in Santa Barbara. It happened because of Watergate and the peculiar leverages one event had upon another.

It is yet to be established that the domino principle will change the politics of Asia. But it is certainly established that the domino principle has changed the politics of America.

It began with the fear of the omnipotent president on foreign affairs. The revolt in Congress was in reaction to the uses made by Lyndon Johnson of the Gulf of Tonkin Resolution passed in 1965. Before that, Republicans in particular had criticized executive arrogance in foreign affairs. Indeed, if the standards brought against Mr. Nixon's conduct of foreign affairs had been used against Franklin Delano Roosevelt, I do believe the gentleman would have been not only impeached, but hanged.

Then, with the general disgust that followed Mr. Nixon's resignation, the voters stayed home in droves, and those who went to the polls voted substantially for a young set of legislators who went to Washington quite determined to dominate not only foreign policy, but to run the domestic plant as well. It happened that this set of legislators were of a progressive inclination: opposed to any of the ideas loosely associated with the memory of Mr. Nixon. Accordingly, they came to Washington and began doing what everybody likes most to do: spend other people's money.

Early on, in a show of power against the Democratic leadership, which has always believed in deficit financing but stops this side of the Weimar Republic level, they established rule by caucus. This is now called King Caucus, and it tends to work as follows: The majority party caucuses, and reaches a conclusion concerning a particular issue. The minority is considered bound by the wishes of the majority, even as in a parliamentary democracy in Europe. So that when they appear on the floor of, say, the House of Representatives, the Democrats vote like the Rockettes, and huge majorities sanction the populist policies voted by the majority of the caucus.

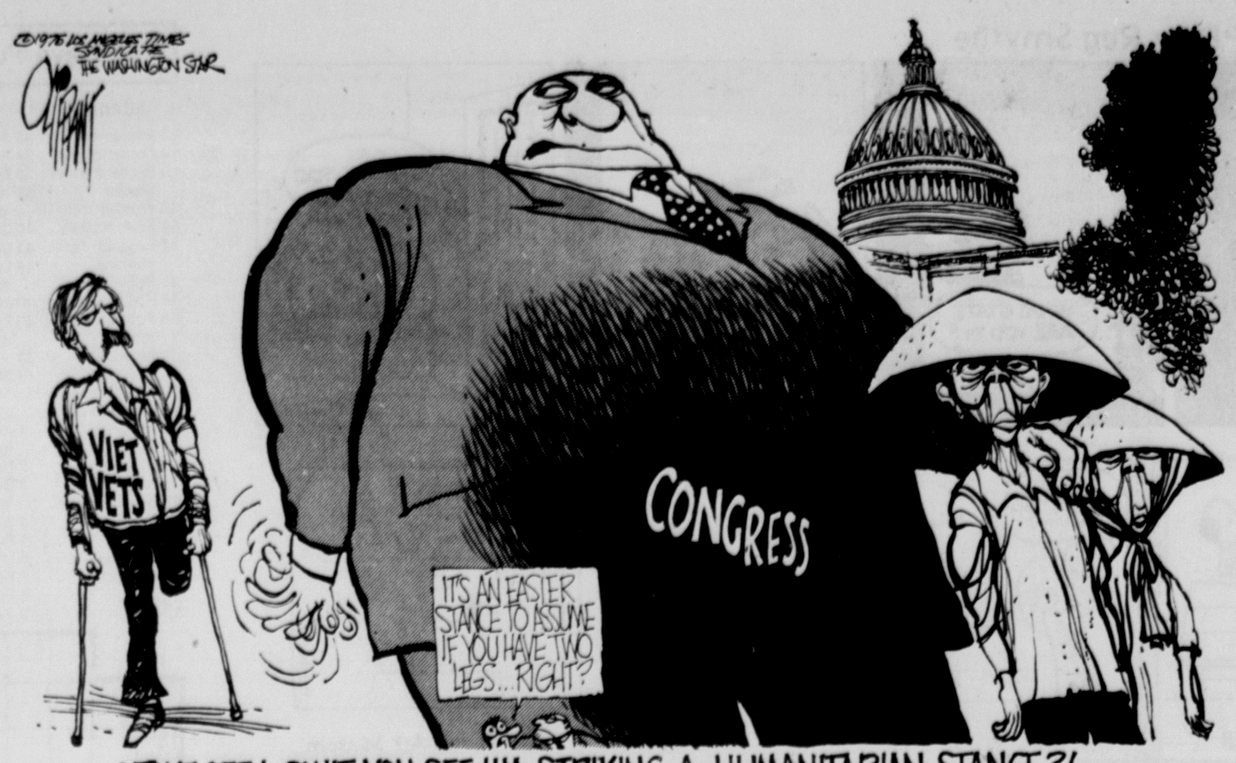
It is always a little risky to play this game, but it is fair to play it just the same: Applied to the present situation, it is possible to say that Congress is being run by a set of legislators who received the vote of about 20 per cent of the American people. That's how many, in the election of 1974, rolled up the Democratic landslide.

Now, conservative complaints against executive arrogance were not overstated. The best single treatment of the subject is in James Burnham's book, Congress and the American Tradition, published nearly 20 years ago.

But legislative supremacy suggests legislative responsibility. Otherwise, what you have is legislative tyranny. In the situation as it is developing, Congressmen appear to be voting without any regard for any fixed principle whatever. This is not, to be sure, a good season for collegiate principles. The idea that everybody's individual conscience ought to be the only guide is enshrined in the intellectual successes of Daniel Ellsberg and the Berrigan Brothers.

Congress proceeds on twin assumptions. The first is that every Congressman is entitled not only to know all the nation's secrets but, in fact, to use his own judgment on whether to share them with the Associated Press. The other assumption is that it is an act of bourgeois restraint to spend less money than is required to achieve whatever philanthropic purpose any legislator has in mind.

The natural answer to an irresponsible Congress is — a responsible Congress. It is Congress itself that should curb the excesses of King Caucus. Otherwise, it requires the reestablishment of a dominant executive. There are conservative theorists who reason that only a strong executive can summon the public power to contest an irresponsible Congress backed by the huge bureaucracy it feeds. We need at this moment, above all, expressions from responsible Democrats in the House and in the Senate deploring the jacobinical excesses of some of their colleagues. These Democrats need, in turn, support from sober members of the progressive establishment. Because mature men know that, in the end, nothing is achieved by Congressional irresponsibility except the loss of freedom and stability.



'TAKE OFF! CAN'T YOU SEE I'M STRIKING A HUMANITARIAN STANCE?'

Special call

We applaud the action of Governor Brown in calling the State legislature into special session to seek a legislative answer to the problems of medical malpractice insurance.

The session gets under way today.

The situation has become intolerable and threatens the health of the people of this state and the very existence of hospital facilities.

Some compromise must be worked out in the legislature.

Physicians under the pressure of massive insurance premium hikes have indicated that the special session, coupled with general agreement on what the session would accomplish, likely would end the growing doctors' strike.

Brown says that he will ask the legislature to pass bills providing greater discipline by physicians, creating a "Medical Peace Corps" to serve needy Californians and establishing a voluntary binding arbitration to resolve malpractice claims.

He is also urging lawmakers to set "reasonable limits" on attorneys' fees in malpractice cases and to give the state power to regulate hospital rates and hospital bed capacity.

These are highly controversial matters that will take great length to solve.

It is hoped that the legislature will first address themselves to remedial short-term remedies to the major problem and fashion a long-term program such as Brown suggests later.

Dear Sir:

With respect to your editorial of Tuesday, May 13, 1975, would you please cancel my subscription to the Lompoc Record. Thank you.

Roy A. Ekstrom, teacher

Dear Mr. Crompe,

I wish to comment on several inaccurate statements made in your recent editorial "Teacher Salaries" for the benefit of the taxpayer who should be presented with both sides of the issue.

The Certificated Employee's Council, who negotiate for the teachers in the district, did not originally ask for a 26 per cent salary increase. This figure has been admittedly miscalculated by the School District and should be retracted by them.

Automatic salary step increases are received by many teachers; however, more than 200 teachers (over 37 per cent) do not receive these increases because they are at the end of the salary schedule.

It has been learned that the reference to the "militancy of the organized teacher" refers to the demonstrations that have occurred. These demonstrations were not militant in any way, but were very peaceful and friendly. In view of the cost-of-living increases in the past year, there is absolutely no need for teachers to apologize or feel guilty for requesting an adequate salary and fringe benefit increase. However, the main thrust of the demonstrations was to stress, as evidenced by the placards, the need for music and art teachers in the early grades; more librarians so that elementary libraries can be used daily; counselors in the elementary schools; lower class sizes so that teaching can be more individualized in reading and math; a hot lunch program; and adequate medical and dental care for teachers and their families. These items have been vital teacher concerns for several years. Even though the CEC package has been in the hands of the district since early January, these items have not been touched upon in this year's negotiations.

The most difficult item to stomach was the scare tactics used in the projection of gigantic tax rate increases while at the same time the district is estimating an ending reserve balance of over 3.2 million dollars. This balance is almost 25 per cent of the budget — most districts consider a reserve of 5 per cent to be sufficient.

In summary, it is unfortunate that the editorial was written with so many of the important statements of fact distorted. This did not present a realistic picture of teachers as a group or of the actual financial situation in the district.

Sincerely,
Norman A. Larson,
President,

Dear Sir:

As a member of the teaching profession, I am quite used to reading the annual slap in the face from your editorial section at salary negotiation time. But this time I would like to make a rebuttal to a few of your comments.

The so-called 26 per cent wage increase originally asked for was in fact closer to 20 per cent and represented monies that would have been necessary to put our salaries in line with the increased cost of living costs of the past five years. True, we have received pay raises in each of those years, but not one of them matched the increase in the cost of living for any of those years. Moreover the latest amount being asked for is around 11 per cent, which will hardly even match the inflation of the past year.

You are right when you state we "cannot be satisfied with automatic salary step increases each year," when certain teachers on the bottom rung of the pay schedule qualify for food stamps because their wages are so low. Also teachers with 10 years or more experience do not receive any further pay raises based on longevity, because they have topped out on the pay ladder.

Every year at this time the district juggles its spending estimates for the coming year and makes dire predictions about deficit spending. Yet every year ends with a large surplus of several millions of dollars. The current school tax rate is the lowest in the county and has been for many years.

You also stated that an average teacher earns over $15,000 dollars per year. Then I must be a good example of your average teacher. I have a credential which required five years of college plus a masters degree and over 75 units past the bachelors degree. Very few professional engineers or even dentists are required to take as much coursework as I have taken, yet they probably have much greater earnings. Several diesel mechanics who work for JM earned over $16,000 last year plus generous fringe benefits. This year with guaranteed cost of living increases written into their contracts, they should receive even more.

You further stated, "working only 175 days per year, this amonuts to a rather decent salary." Teachers receive no overtime pay, yet many of us spend up to 12 hours per day in school-related activities. On weekends, many hours are often spent grading papers and making lesson plans. In summer many teachers go back to school at their own expense or use at least part of the time organizing materials and study units for the next school year. Very few teachers could expect to find seasonal work which would provide a decent wage during the summer months. I am very happy to be able to work for the Lompoc Unified School District, but if you would like to hire me this summer, I will be available, since my employer will be laying me off this June until business picks up again in the fall.

Yours truly,
John Hermansen

Dear Sir:

I would like to comment on the letter concerning the proposed Exxon facility which appeared in the Monday, May 5, Record. It is too bad that Mr. McGray, the writer, chose this way to demonstrate his ignorance of the issues and technical matters of Proposition A, particularly, if he is the Mr. McGray who uses so many petroleum products in his paving business.

Mr. McGray was correct in pointing out that the Exxon Las Flores Canyon project is a foot-in-the-door for the other energy company projects he cited; indeed, we expect many more to follow close behind if Exxon has its way on the matter, but I wonder if we want to invite these huge companies into our beautiful, mostly unspoiled county, allowing them to wreak esthetic and environmental changes many citizens wouldn't vote for — if they could look into the future. Thus, the Exxon project is a threat not so much by what it is, as by what it promised: the transformation of the North County coastline into a strip of petrochemical refineries and power plants, the destruction of priceless scenic beauty and natural refuge in the largest still undeveloped coastal region of Southern California.

Early in his letter Mr. McGray tells us that the Exxon facility would help working people throughout the county, and that if they don't vote for its construction, they'll be struggling to survive on food stamps and unemployment benefits. Certainly unemployment is a problem here, but Mr. McGray, like many, fails to realize that when a company builds a new plant (especially a highly sophisticated heavy industrial one), two things happen which often cancel out the potential of the new facility to lower the local unemployment figures. First, the company moves many of its own previously hired employes into the new operation, instead of hiring the local jobless, and second, unemployed job seekers from out of town hear about the new industry and swarm into the area, hoping for employment. It is a fallacy to assert that bringing in the Exxon facility will also bring in more jobs for local people.

Mr. McGray displayed his technical ignorance by contending that "sulphur is not harmful." His mother may well have given him sulphur in his molasses when he was a youth, but had she continually given him sulphur dioxide, which is produced by the burning of sulphur containing petroleum, he would not now be alive. As a matter of fact, the Air Pollution Control Department in the county is most insistent that businesses burn low sulphur fuel oil at a premium of approximately 20 per cent in price, because of the damage of sulphur dioxide pollution, which has the main factor in the air pollution that killed 4,000 people in the London smog disaster of 1952.

It would be far better if Mr. McGray would spend more of his time promoting conversion of the garbage he mentions which is dumped into Corral Canyon (near the site of the proposed Exxon operation) into useful energy, and less time propagandizing for Exxon, which needs no help in achieving its self-serving goals. It is ironic that Mr. McGray, a small businessman, asks for the support of the workers in passing a ballot proposition that would benefit one of the largest corporations in the world, a corporation that with others in 1973 conspired to limit the availability of gasoline and drive up its price — a move which forced thousands of small businessmen out of gasoline retailing and drained the wallets and purses of workers who had to fuel their cars.

Let's be sure that any development in this county is truly in the best interest of its residents and not just profitable for multi-national energy companies and the like.

To assure environmentally safe and socially constructive development of our natural resources for all county citizens, vote No on A May 27.

Michael McCombs

Dear Sir:

I am writing this letter to let you know my concern about the problem of alcoholism within our state and county. I understand, we as Californians consume more alcohol per person than any other state. That Santa Barbara County has approximately 15,000 problem drinkers and at least four people around the alcoholic are adversely affected by this illness — four times 15,000 equals 60,000 people in this county are suffering the consequence of the alcoholics addictions. (Statistics from National Council on Alcoholism, Santa Barbara County).

I believe more funding should be provided to assist in the nation's third largest health problem, but I don't feel the taxpayer should have to foot the bill. Senate Bill 204 will accomplish the expansion of alcoholic programs within the state without increased taxes by putting a small excise tax on alcohol beverage. I support SB 204 and I hope you will too.

If anyone else feels the same way, clip this letter and send it to Senator Rains now.

Dear Editor:

Several people have asked me why I haven't written any letters to the editor lately. Just haven't had anything special to write about. Don't meet as many people now that I'm walking all over town. I sold my three wheeler bike. Have been back two weeks now from my yearly visit to see my children in Florida. Have to go early in the year as it gets too hot and humid there for me. I'm sure glad to be back in Lompoc. Missed the good people and friends, and my Lompoc Record, while gone. See you at the Flower Festival. My motto is still "I Like Lompoc."

More than one and a quarter million college graduates are expected to don cap and gown soon, an all-time high. And while the job market may not be at an all-time low, the Class of '75 is going to find employment offers down by at least four per cent from last year. This word comes from a poll taken by the College Placement Council.

What makes the picture even less encouraging is the fact that nearly 60 per cent of this year's crop of graduates will be liberal arts majors, a group with the worst job prospects. Although the current recession is aggravating the problem for all graduates, liberal arts students have been experiencing a decrease in job offers for the past five years.

Three-fourths of the employers who responded to a CPC survey said they filled less than 10 per cent of their college hires from liberal arts ranks. By contrast, students with engineering and business training are still being recruited. Even though the number of job offers for engineers has also dropped, these grads will find jobs waiting for them, particularly in the energy field.

Nobody recommends shifting liberal arts students into engineering or turning liberal arts colleges into trade schools. But with better career planning, counseling and placement services, improvements can be made, says the CPC.

"What must be found are the means to make liberal arts graduates more competitive in the employment market, particularly in reference to entry-level positions," says Dr. Alva C. Cooper, chairman of the CPC study and a former president of the council.

For example, students need to be given a broader choice of minors and electives and must begin their career planning early, no later than the sophomore year. Employers need to be encouraged to launch innovative programs involving such things as internships, part-time work and vacation jobs.

Finally, the federal government can help by providing better statistics on job trends and, since the hard-pressed colleges have little money to spare, by providing for career counseling at the four-year level.

The College Placement Council has scheduled a national meeting in Washington this month to examine the whole question of higher education and careers and will submit its views and recommendations to Congress.

THOUGHTS WHILE SHAVING

It seems one can almost see that look in kids' eyes these days that school isn't lasting much longer this year ... That Cypress street job has changed our driving habits for we must detour now to get home. The street needed the job, however ... Wonder what's to become of that A-Frame building near the Chamber of Commerce office? And, of course, the missile ... That city organic garden at the top of Olive Avenue is in beautiful shape. Appears that it is receiving a great deal of tender, loving care ... We understand Future Farmers of America members are involved in knocking down empty lot weeds. Good projects.
